

Established in 1975, Faculty of Humanities and Social Sciences was one of the three founding faculties of Udon Thani Teacher College which is now Udon Thani Rajabhat University.

Faculty of Humanities and Social Sciences takes advantage of its location as the home of Thai civilization, the culture-rich environment, and the diversifying modern society as it offers students within the humanities and social sciences disciplines.

The Faculty is consistent with the University's mission to be the education institute for community development. It has major roles in preserving and expanding local knowledge and cultures as well as providing an exposure to global and international values. As diversity is the core value of arts and sciences regarding people and society, Faculty of Humanities and Social Sciences watches, learns, and implements the diversity through continuing research and innovation.
